D12.12:

AND GOING AFTER THE EXCITEMENT OF THE ARMY NATIONAL GUARD.

For some nurses, it takes more than an occasional weekend getaway to recover from their rounds. It takes a complete change of pace.

That's why Lisa Milford, and thousands of other nurses, serve part-time in their hometown Army National Guard. Two days a month and two weeks a year, they work with talented, dedicated professionals, exchanging ideas, solving problems, and establishing lasting friendships in the process.

Join them. You'll earn the respect of your peers, plus a good salary and excellent benefits.

So if you graduated from an accredited nursing program and have practiced professionally, full-time, for at least six months within the 12 months prior to your Guard application, think about expanding your medical horizons in the Army Guard.

Defend your country, help your community, and enjoy a change of pace.

No matter how you look at it, the Guard offers rewards you just won't find anywhere else. To find out more, just send back the attached card.
